

BRIAN

It's very important that patients are matched up with the appropriate type of urologist. Many people believe that if you just refer over to a urologist, the patient will be taken care of, and that is true.

HELFAND:

However, when patients want the most advanced care and the latest treatment options, it's really important to refer to a urologist who is specialized in that type of disease process. The reason for that is it's been well-shown that the outcomes are significantly better, complication rates are lower, and patient happiness is greater when you match patients up with the appropriate subspecialist.