

KATHERINE I think our excellent outcomes speak for themselves. So a patient's quality of life after surgery is significantly KOPKASH: based on how they feel about their breasts. It's a huge part of their sexuality. And it really does matter in the long term.

There have been numerous studies that have looked at quality of life. And their satisfaction with their cosmetic outcome has significant effects. We know that women that we give an excellent cosmetic outcome to have less depression. They have less anxiety. They feel better when they're in that survivor role.
